

The 3 documents you must have

Achieving security and peace of mind

Will

A Will delivers certainty and control over who receives your assets and who manages your estate when you die. It provides security and certainty for your family. Don't risk one of the most important documents of your life on a DIY kit. Do it once, do it right and have peace of mind.

Power Of Attorney

If you lose capacity through illness or accident do you want someone you know and trust to manage your financial and property affairs? The only way to achieve this is to act now - because by the time you need a Power of Attorney it may be too late.

Enduring Guardian

If you can't look after yourself you will want a trusted loved one to make the best decisions for you. Where you will live? What care will you be given? Decisions about health care and life support? Act now and appoint someone who knows your wishes and wants the best for you.
